This year's AILA WA Awards recognised UDLA for its role in developing Yawuru's Cultural Management Plan. Picutre: Russell Barton

Award win for project planners

YAWURU'S Cultural Management Plan has won its architects a prestigious State award for breaking new ground in the field of landscape design.

Fremantle-based landscape architecture firm Urban Development Landscape Architecture was presented with the 2012 medal at the Australian Institute of Landscape Architects WA awards in East Perth on May 25.

Judge Helen Whitbread said the panel was inspired by the new realm of landscape architectural practice that the Yawuru Cultural Management Plan project brought to the profession.

"The project doesn't just look at the physical landscape but also the cultural landscape," she said. "With the North-West and native title both areas of keen interest for many Western Australians, the Yawuru Cultural Management Plan has captured the essence of the future of landscape architecture, representing a fusion of theory and practice, collaborative engagement, and environmental and social sustainability."

Under the co-ordination of project manager Sarah Yu, UDLA was commissioned by Yawuru in 2010 to assist in the creation of a unique plan for the long-term management of Yawuru country.

The Yawuru people were awarded ownership of 530,000ha of land by the Federal Court in 2006, with parts under exclusive Native Title.
