

Science to be stripped naked at this festival

AMY WILLIAMS

SCIENCE has been stripped down to the bare bones this week for the Science Week Festival 2011: Naked Science.

The national festival is this year celebrating science based on observation and using simple tools and events in Broome start on Sunday.

A highlight is set to be a conversation with Yawuru traditional owner Neil McKenzie on Saturday, August 20.

He will cover changes to Yawuru and Kimberley coastal land over time, from the perspective of traditional owners.

"It's a story of what life was like here before the effects of industry, pollution and population increase, and how the biodiversity of Roebuck Bay has been affected," he said.

This Sunday there will be birdwatching at Broome Bird Observatory and a tour of dinosaur prints on Broome's coast.

On Monday, there will be a weather watcher's tour with Broome's meteorologists and, on Tuesday, the art of making potions and lotions from local plants with Robyn Wells.

Kevin Smith will present the antics of flatback turtles on Cable Beach on Wednesday, and Greg Quicke will offer discounts to a limited number of Astro Tour customers that night.

Traditional owner Neil McKenzie, right, pictured with whale researcher Richard Costin, left, will present as part of Science Week in Broome.

On Thursday, explore whales, reef, coral and pearls with James Brown and Ali McCarthy of Cygnet Bay's Kimberley Marine Research Station and whale researcher Richard Costin.

Investigate the art of traditional fire making and burning with fire-raiser Tiepen Forrest.

Pat Lowe and Backroom Press will present stories from Jimmy Pike's last book.

As the week winds up, Engawa Architects presents innovative housing design to suit the Broome climate on Saturday, and Kandy Curran will explain there's more to Town Beach than meets the eye – bring old shoes or mud boots.

To finish on a high, Carol Palmer presents a big screen event in the park on Australia's only native dolphin, the snubfin.

To book, phone Environs Kimberley on 9192 1221 or visit www.scienceweek.gov.au.

Broome to pay tribute to veterans

BROOME will pay tribute to Vietnam Veterans on Thursday, August 18, with a special ceremony at Bedford Park.

Broome RSL vice-president John

Dayman said the service would start at 11am and all would be welcome to the RSL afterwards.

Mr Dayman said this was an important event for many people.

Leukaemia Foundation
LIGHT THE NIGHT

Calling on all
angels

When Australians shine a lantern of love, life or hope this September, they will create a brighter future for people with leukaemia, lymphoma and myeloma.

So be an angel and find out more about hosting an event or lantern drive in your area.

Visit lightthenight.org.au or call 1800 500 088.

Leukaemia Foundation
VISION TO CURE
MISSION TO CARE

PRINCIPAL PARTNER
BRIDGESTONE

MAJOR NATIONAL PARTNER

SEALEY'S Broome

TWO STAR SPONSOR

ALCOA