

Vincenzo Mancuso took this superb picture on Cable Beach last week, which illustrates classic wet-season cloud build-up in the background.

Jessica Bosman recently took her mother, who was visiting from overseas, to view this breathtaking sunset from the rocks at Gantheaume Point.

Photographers snap beauty of season

The wet season in Broome continues to inspire some great photographs.

Thanks to Broome Advertiser's dedicated readers, we have again amassed an array of colourful and spectacular images, showing everything from cloud formations to lightning hammering into Roebuck Bay.

We still have a few weeks before the season ends and encourage anyone wanting to submit their weather pictures to email news@broomead.com.au to be considered for a classic finale.

Inga Petrov snapped this wet-season weather cloud formation at Gantheaume Point in mid-January.
